Research, public service, and other sponsored programs help fulfill the University's diverse mission. Sponsored programs are scholarly, professional, and creative activities that University personnel conduct with support from external funding such as grants, contracts, and cooperative agreements. The Universities sponsored programs provide important benefits to the state, nation, and world. Examples include: new industries and jobs; improved health care and medical therapies; environmental protection; entrepreneurial ventures for new technologies; cultural enrichment and a deeper understanding of our diverse, multi-faceted world and improved strategies for addressing social concerns.

Last year, UNC personnel won more than 7,380 competitive sponsored awards valued at over $1 billion. Many of these support programs involving collaboration among other universities or investigators, both national and international. A growing number focus on economic development, technology transfer, faculty development, and K-12/university partnerships. This office serves as a focal point for research collaborations across the 16 campus system.
