

A&T STUDENTS HOST ELECTION WATCH PARTY NOV. 4

GREENSBORO, N.C. - North Carolina A&T State University students, who have coined the phrase, "Real Aggies Vote" will spend Tuesday, Nov. 4, at a Student Election Watch Party. The event will be held in the Memorial Student Union, Stallings Ballroom, from 7 p.m. to midnight. It is free and open to the campus community.

A&T event organizers say the goal of the election watch party is to educate students to the political process and keep them involved in the importance of voting. TV-One will cover the event as part of its Election Night 2008 coverage. The news services will interview students and capture the excitement as students, who support both presidential candidates, keep up with election results.

"Our goal is to complete the trisector. This night is a culmination of voter registration, voter education and voter mobilization. We intend to ensure our students have a party with a purpose and that they understand this is the beginning of their participation in democracy," said Taryn J. Mitchell, one of the event organizers from the Office of Student Development.

A&T journalism students will be "moblogging" at the election party, using camera phones, digital cameras and camcorders and political science professors will be sharing their expertise.

The event is cosponsored with TV-One and hosted by N.C. A&T's Office of Student Development, the Civic and Service Education Program (C.A.S.E), the Council of Presidents (COP), the Junior Class, the A&T Voter Task Force, and the Campus Life Mentors. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.
